Speaker for Terrorism Seminar

Security Troubleshooter Examines KGB

Exclude mainland China and parts of southern Africa and John M. Maury has seen the world. Monitoring potential U.S. security trouble spots was his job for more than 28 years with the CIA.

Maury will be one of four speakers at a March 31 symposium at the Naples Beach Club Hotel, being hosted by the Association of Former Intelligence officers and co-sponsored by the Naples

Daily News and Palmer Communications.

MAURY'S TALK will be on the KGB, the secret police of the Soviet Union.

The 69-year-old University of Virginia Law School graduate, joined the CIA in 1946, after six years of service during World War II with the U.S. Marine Corps, assigned to naval intelligence.

Maury began studying the Soviet Union while at the Naval Intelligence School and Cornell University Russia Institute in 1942. In 1944-46 he was chief of a U.S. Military mission to Murmansk in north Russia.

Conference on Terrorism and Subversion

After joining the CIA, he served as deputy chief and acting chief of CIA staff concentrating on the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe. And, from 1957 to 1962 he headed the "Soviet Russia Division" of the CIA.

His talk for the seminar is entitled: "KGB Operations, the Cutting Edge of Russian Aggression."

Maury also has served as assistant secretary of defense, a consultant for the defense department, and a legislative counsel for the CIA. He has lectured on national security, Soviet affairs and intelligence matters at National War

College, Air University, Naval War College, Foreign Service Institute and various colleges and universities.

HE ALSO is a recipient of CIA Distinguished Intelligence Medal and Department of Defense Medal for distinguished public service.

Joining Maury at the seminar will be Lt. Gen. Eugene Tighe, W. Raymond Wannall, a former assistant director of the FBI; and David Atlee Phillips, past chief of CIA's Latin American and Caribbean operation.

The day-long seminar will feature two speakers in the morning and two in the afternoon followed by a one-hour panel discussion. The seminar is open to the public, free of charge, but reservations are suggested. Call 262-6677.
